

bcma@lists.vifa.ca

The Museum of Vancouver is disposing of a prop/replica (about 7/8th scale) of the “Colonists’ train car” from the museum’s former Vancouver history exhibition (1970s-90s). Please see attached images of the train car then and now. It was well researched and constructed, and a popular piece for a climb aboard experience. We would love to see it find a new home. Please share with anyone who may be interested. Transport would be the responsibility of the recipient.

Interested parties should contact the Museum of Vancouver by telephoning 604-730-5329 or emailing wstacey@museumofvancouver.ca

Measurements:

There are two pallets, the first one being 40”x 47”, the second being the same.

The longest piece is approx 180” by 80” and the tallest is 180” by 96”.

There are quite a few pieces to this and it would probably be able to be taken in one go via a large truck.

Pictures of the car assembled:

Pictures of the car disassembled, which it is currently:

