This exhibition brings together five artists from British Columbia to explore the tacit emotional and experiential resonance that is uncovered through the active labor of material production and bodily awareness. Through the manipulation and engagement with varying soft mediums, these works create a visual language that challenges a pervasive, passive relationship to contemporary material culture. By revealing a sensitivity to the inherent value of bodily experience, tactility, and form - a certain vibrancy calls attention to these artists' relationship to process and labor, well-being, the environment and body.
